Newtonville Mass. February
25. 1880.

—The National Guard of Virginia City, Nev., according to the Blue Hill News, was recently captured in its armory by the lady teachers of the municipality. As at least one of the members of the company was taken completely by surprise by the petticoat raid, an unconditional surrender of muskets and coat buttons was the result. The victorious ladies then made the following declaration of ancient rights: Albeit, as often as leape yearre occurre, the woman holdeth prerogative over the manne in all matters of amusements, as dawning and the lyke; so that when the lady inviteth the manne, it shall not be lawfull for him to say her naye, but shall entertain her propossall in all gude courtesie. Following were the orders of the evening:—

1. Gentlemen are requested to conduct themselves with the most ladylike propriety. Therefore it is expected that no gentleman will promenade alone or leave his seat unless escorted by a lady.

2. Gentlemen will please be kindly considerate, remembering the natural diffidence of their admirers.

3. No gentleman shall invite a lady to dance.

4. Ladies will await the presence of the gentlemen at the door of the dressing room, in order to escort them to the dancing hall.

5. Ladies will please keep their engagements promptly.

6. Ladies will endeavor to avoid leaving their partners standing alone in the centre of the room on account of the awkwardness of the situation.

Having gained this complete ascendancy over their captives the conquering heroines degraded them to the level of partners for a dance, and tortured them in that way nearly all night.

The following is the letter of Dr. Holmes to the Harvard club, read at the dinner on Friday night New York, and referred to in our despatches:—

Boston, Feb. 14, 1880.

My Dear Sir.—I regret that I shall not be able to be present at the annual dinner of the Harvard Club of New York on the 20th of this month.

If I had been with my friends and brothers at their meeting, I could not have helped saying that the recent scene between our Alma Mater and her New York graduate reminds me of that unconsciously but convulsively comic passage in Thomson's "Seasons," where Damon and Musidora are the characters.

You remember how Musidora, like our Alma Mater,

—a fairer nymph

Than ever blest Arcadian stream—

Came "to bathe her fervent limbs" in the refreshing wave, as our Alma Mater cools off her heated blood at her overseers' meetings.

You recollect how Damon, the pensive youth, pierced with Love's delightful pangs," kept his wistful eye upon Musidora,

"As from the snowy leg

And slender foot th' inverted silk she drew,"— in realistic phrase, pulled off her stockings, just as our New York graduate has sat watching our Lady of Harvard as she

"Stripped her beauteous limbs"

waded into a discussion at an overseers' meeting. You have not forgotten how, at last—rather late in the day—the law of propriety compelled theudent but strictly moral young lover to retire, as the law of Massachusetts compelled the remote and loving graduate to keep his distance; how Damon left a written document addressed to Musidora—who once more stands for our Harvard adonna—after reading which,

"As if to marble struck, devoid of sense,
A stupid moment motionless she stood,"
and then replied in those sweet and encouraging words,

"Which soon her Damon kissed with weeping joy.

"Dear youth (dear graduate) be still as now Discreet; the time may come you need not fly."

Let us hope the time will soon come when the instant graduate-lover of Fair Harvard will not have to play the part of Peeping Tom of Coventry, but be admitted to her presence not only when she is arrayed in the holiday costume of her anniversaries, but also in the negative drapery of her debating conclaves; when she has drawn off the inverted silk, and so forth,

"To taste the lucid coolness of the flood"

argument at an overseers' meeting.

Very truly yours,

O. W. HOLMES.

THE REMEDY FOR PAUPERISM.

Under the head "Cut off the Supplies from Pauperism" the Associated Charities of Boston have circulated a paper giving valuable suggestions to persons who may be in doubt as to the proper course to pursue when solicited for alms by paupers. The paper says: Begging in the streets, at houses and stores is the source of pauperism. It converts poor men and women into paupers, teaches them a life of begging, seduces them from habits of industry, and tempts them to train up their children and their neighbor's children as professional mendicants.....Poverty is bad enough. But pauperism, which is this love of poverty, and the hatred of work, is infinitely worse. Pauperism is a disease which it is almost impossible to eradicate after it has gained a firm footing....This is the evil against which Boston should set its face like a flint, and resolve to stop it where it is, to reduce it and root it out as fast as possible....No excuse for giving alms, large or small, before inquiry and without knowledge exists in Boston....Three societies exist, all in the Charity building, any one of which will answer promptly any letter of inquiry about any case. Any one of them will see that alms, if needed, are given, so that no suffering can occur: The overseers of the poor, the Provident Association and the Associated Charities. Mail any letter to any of these societies, Charity building, Chardon street. All these societies are working in harmony, the two first giving relief where needed, with devoted visitors ready to investigate and relieve all distress; the Associated Charities, with a corps of friendly visitors, large and growing larger, aiming to help every family to regain its independence where this is possible, and in most parts of the city having also regular paid agents, whose main duty it will always be to find how men and women, boys and girls, can best be made self-supporting. Begging is a crime by law. This law should be supported by enlightened public sentiment, and enforced by the police. Charity in all its branches, relief, visitation and friendly aid, is so well organized that pauperism ought no longer to be supported by thoughtless alms.

PRACTICAL HINTS.

The Associated Charities of Boston call attention to the following suggestions for the treatment of persons asking alms:—

I. Do not give money to persons begging in the streets or at doors.

II. Refer all cases where the need is claimed to be urgent to the Charity building, Chardon street, which is open every week day from nine A.M. to six P.M.

III. If the application is made on Sunday or upon a week day after six o'clock P.M., or in a part of the city distant from Chardon street, as Dorchester, Brighton or West Roxbury, and it is claimed that the need is urgent, refer the applicant to the nearest police station, where urgent needs will be relieved and persons sent, if practicable and expedient, to the Wayfarer's Lodge for men or the Temporary Home for Women and Childreu, or sheltered and fed temporarily at the station.

IV. In all cases take the name and address and mail it to the Associated Charities, Charity building, Chardon street, adding any inquiries or wishes which will secure a proper disposal of the case and a reply if you ask it.

THE METHODIST BISHOPS.

At the meeting of Methodist preachers yesterday, the committee on discussions presented the following important resolutions, which were assigned for consideration next week:—

Whereas, death, within the last quadrennium, has removed from us two of our excellent, efficient and venerated bishops; and

Whereas, in view of the approaching general conference, the question of strengthening the episcopacy by the appointment of additional bishops and other cognate questions are now commanding the thought of the church; and whereas, these are questions which affect all parts of the church alike, upon which it is eminently fitting that there should be a full expression of opinion,—therefore

Resolved, That in our opinion it is both constitutional and highly expedient that the general conference divide the territory occupied by our church into episcopal districts (not in the diocesan sense), and that a bishop be appointed for a period of four years to each; and that such an arrangement would result in the interest of increased effectiveness and economy of episcopal superintendence, as well as in the interest of the lives and health of the bishops.

Resolved, That, with the work districted as above, it is not necessary or expedient to add to the number of the bishops, especially for the home work.

Resolved, That it is necessary and expedient that two or three missionary bishops be elected for the supervision of the foreign work.

Resolved, That in our opinion with the work thus distributed a single presiding elder would be sufficient for an annual conference, or, if this be thought inexpedient, then let the conference be divided into small districts, especially in such conferences as desire it, and let the presiding elder be appointed, not only to a district, but also to a station, and draw his support principally from the charge he serves.

PHYSICIANS AND LAWYERS.

There are several points of resemblance between the legal and the medical professions. There are too many doctors and there are too many lawyers. And the excess is mainly in our own unhappy country. In Berlin there is one physician to every 50,000; in Paris one to every 100,000. This, of course, too many, but these cities are old and strong, and can stand it. But here in New York according to Dr. Wyeth, there is one doctor to each citizen who pays a personal tax. [Laughter.]

Another resemblance may not have struck you. The lawyer who finds at his client's death that the client has deceived him and left a larger estate than he intended he should, can nearly always correct the mistake by continuing his professional services before the surrogate. So the skillful physician, after studying the diseases of his patient through life, can nearly always, by his own efforts, provide himself with the material for continuing his studies after death. To this I see but one objection. It is apt to recall to lay minds the reasons the man gave for beating his dead dog: "I want to teach him there is a punishment after death." [Laughter.] There is another resemblance. The flippant of both sexes are apt to choose one profession as objects of their wit. How often do we hear such phrases as "Yes, if the lawyers leave him anything," or, "The lawyers will get it all." Such flings are very unjust, for lawyers of high standing always make it a point to leave something to the client. And in your case, gentlemen, how tired you must get of the wits, who suggest a secret partnership between necessary trades and your own lofty professions. Why, only yesterday in a daily, whose brazen editor sits beside me, was a paragraph of false news, telling its readers that when the authorities of the Fiji Islands couldn't find any other cause to insert in their certificates, they inserted: "Died from the medicines of the missionaries."

The points of resemblance are too numerous. Let me pass to a striking difference. Physicians are always conceited. I never saw a lawyer who was. I had always thought this the hesetting sin of the medical profession. I was more than confirmed when I attended the commencement exercises of the Bellevue Medical College two years ago. The Rev. Dr. Beach, whom I suspect from his knowledge of their dispositions to be the regular chaplain of their school, prayed lustily that they might be delivered from the sin of self conceit. I struck, in my delight, Dr. Barker, who sat by me on the platform, and gave him a look as of one who should say, "How is that for high?" Dr. Barker said nothing at the time, but on walking home explained it in this way: "You see, said he, Dr. Beach sometimes opens his eyes in prayer. A nervous affection, you see. Well, just that moment he opened his eyes and happened to see—Hammond." This explanation was not satisfactory. "I believe it's true of the three schools and of the medical fraternity. And that's why all doctors are so healthy, and have such appetites. They feel good. They have no dissatisfaction with themselves, and this feeling is most conducive to health. I know so, because Mary Clemmer says that's the reason why Sydney Bartlett, the head of the Boston bar, is as young today at eighty as Dr. Pardee is at forty. Mr. Bartlett is the only lawyer who was ever charged with conceit. I suspect it was not deserved, but was fastened on him by the envy of Rufus Choate, who, seeing him walk by, said: 'There goes Bartlett lost in thought. And I know what he is thinking about. It is whether he made the Almighty, or the Almighty made him.'" to rain.

—Henry G. Vennor, the Canadian weather prophet, has published in the Montreal Witness a new lot of vaticinations. His prophecies not only snow storms in March, notably on the 15th, 16th and 17th, although cold rains may replace snow in Boston and New York. Snow-falls are also declared probable for March 5, 6, 7, 21, 22 and 27, and April may be expected to enter cold and stormy, with snow up to the 4th or 5th, and cold rains about the 10th. The United States are included in the distribution of snow which he advertises for the last half of March.

THE SUBSTANCE OF AN ADDRESS

At the Anniversary of the Congregational Publishing Society, May 28, 1879.

BY REV. ALEXANDER M'KENZIE.

THERE are some respects in which a man is better than a book; there are some respects in which a book is better than a man. The book is cheaper; when we have paid for it, it is ours; it costs nothing to feed or clothe it; it needs no recreation by travel, or the tarry among the hills. It brings to us the best thoughts of the writer. He has thought long and deeply, and condensed his learning, and given to it the best form for our use. We might not be able to get access to the man, or the interview might be hurried. If he came to us, he might find us unprepared to profit by his visit. When his book comes, it is to stay. It waits on our leisure. It allows us to turn from it, and come back when we will. We can ask it to repeat its words till we are sure they are our own. It is twenty-three miles to Andover. If we made the journey, we might not see the distinguished professor whose ripe "Studies of the Old Testament" we can in a few moments make our own. The learned professor of Hebrew might have no time for us; but here are hours and weeks of time embodied in this book named "The Soul," which we can readily have for our own. The privilege is not restricted. So many as wish, they can have the whole, and take it and send it where they will. When Theodore Rousseau was sketching an oak-tree, a rustic said it was folly to make the picture, when he could see the tree itself. But what of the night, or the distant land, where he might wish to look upon the tree? The book will live when the author is dead. It can speak in a thousand places when upon his lips has dropped the long silence. The book has in it, as Milton said, "a potency of life."

It is the work of this Society to call into being, and to give to the land and the world, such books as will serve men well, and advance the cause to which the Church is pledged. The work is essential to every society which appears on this platform to-day. Each of them needs the book, and such books as are provided by this agency. These organizations are grouped in yonder stately building; and the corner-stone of the house is the corner store, and in the corner store is the Publishing Society.

But why is any thing asked here for a work so needful? Are not these books sold? Is not this Society as other booksellers? The books are sold. The Report which is before you shows sales for the past year to the amount of $75,963. This sum has been received almost entirely for religious books and papers. Yet as we send out missionaries at our expense, while many ministers receive their salary from the churches which they serve, so must we add to the books for which we receive pay books which are sent out at our own expense. The missionary must have the book, that it may instruct him and cheer him. He needs it, that on his lonely field he may have the best and latest thoughts of wise men to use against the error and unbelief which he confronts. We have our public and private libraries: he is far from such storehouses. We can at least help him with the new books which are suited to his work. Every one of us would be glad to put in the hands of every missionary in the land this handsome book, the last utterance of Andover upon the theme vital to every man's well-being. It were worth its cost only to have its title look down from his dreary shelf, and in its golden letters say, "The Soul." The man is toiling in the "here," with all its trials, all its opportunities, in a present which crowds so closely about him, that it would not be strange if sometimes he forgot there is any thing beyond. Let him know, that as the sea lies against the land, and summer rests upon spring, so the "hereafter" reaches from the "here." Would not every weary, desolate man find his life start anew if his eye should but read this title, "The Soul Here and Hereafter"? But how shall he have the book, unless it be sent? He needs such books as are made by this agency for his work among the people. His parish is large. Who shall come and watch the seed he sows? Who shall work with him when he has gone across the field? Books will do it. Books well chosen, wisely placed, will be efficient colleagues. How shall the books enter upon the office, unless they be sent?

Along these lines lies the work of this Publishing Society. It is to make books, and some books which otherwise might not be made; it is to keep them in being when their worth is great, but the demand for them is small. We send men to those who have not sought them, and thus make a desire for them. We can do the same with books. The Society makes books and papers to sell to the minister, the Sabbath school, the man, and the child. It procures books and papers which others have made, and places them within the reach of its patrons. It will sell its wares for as low a price as any honest dealer will require. The Society has one very peculiar feature in its work: whatever profit results is spent for the good of its patrons, or in their benevolent efforts. The Publishing Society belongs to the Congregational churches. You, and those who are with you, have here an invested capital of over thirty-nine thousand dollars. With all kind feeling towards other publishers, whose debtors we all are, whose work is more general than ours, but who properly pursue their business for their own advantage, this Society may well claim that it is a proper thing that the Congregational churches should employ their own capital, and foster their own enterprise. If you have a mill which is but partially employed, you surely will carry your own grain to it, rather than pass by to a stranger's mill, where you must pay toll. This is not small, narrow: it is the principle on which business-men conduct business. Understand, brethren: this Society, this capital, these books, are yours. The Society has no personality. It asks no favors, and needs none. If the churches in their work do not need these books, the Society does not need their money. What will shrewd men do with this thirty-nine thousand dollars but use it shrewdly? We ask two things: first, gifts of money, by which books can be given away; secondly, we ask that the owners of this Congregational mill shall patronize it. The stream is full and strong; the wheels are turning steadily. Bring your grain to your own door. The result will be, better flour and better bread. The more question-books, the more "Well-Springs," the more library-books, you buy at your own store, the more capital will there be for better books and papers. Moreover, the more profit there is in your business, the more books can be given where they will carry forward the work you are striving to do here and in all the land. You are in this business of yours in friendly alliance with other publishers; and it is safe to say, that, while they would be glad of your patronage, they will commend you for a prudent use of your own capital. By this policy you will help all your good work, and honor Him at whose feet wise men sit that they may be taught; to whose arms trustful mothers gave their children, that He might lay his hands upon them.

Monday 22/80. Went to Cambridge Mass Agassiz - took me over Training School with Dr Peabody - who introduced me as "Dr Taylor" to 2 or 3 teachers. Lunch with them. Alex. A. & sons - his wife died a week after Prof. A. - who of course.

MINISTERS' AND ACTORS' SALARIES COMPARED. Remarks are often made implying that the ministers are overpaid or at least that such men as Mr. Beecher and Dr. Storrs are extravagantly paid. The following figures, given by the New York Tribune, are worthy of being borne in mind; Beecher gets $20,000; Edwin Booth, $100,000 a year; Dr. Hall, of Fifth avenue, and Dr. Dix, of Trinity, get $15,000, while E. A. Sothern earns over 150,000, as "Lord Dundreary," and John E. Owens plays thirty weeks annually for $90,000. Talmage preaches for $12,000, and Joe Jefferson plays forty weeks at "Rip Van Winkle" and earns $120,000. The scholarly and gifted Dr. Storrs has $10,000, and Maggie Mitchell earns $30,000 to $50,000. Dr. Cuyler works hard and faithfully for $3,000 a year, while Dion Boucicault finished a season as the "Shaugraun," etc., at $3,000 a week, and his managers scolded him in the public prints because he would not play longer at the same price. Dr. Potter, of Grace church, has $10,000, and a parsonage; the eloquent Dr. Tiffany has $10,000; the once vigorous, now venerable, Dr. Chapin gets $10,000, while pretty Miss Neilson makes over $150,000 a year, and Fanny Davenport earns $1,000 every week she plays.

Free High School Assembly
 Minutes. June '80 - action in Prof. Robertson Smith's case

Dr. Begg, whose attitude on this occasion was allowed by friends and opponents alike to be the only one that was consistently logical, then moved simply that the Assembly proceed with the probation of the libel. He subjected Sir Henry Macrieff's motion to a searching criticism, and condemned it as both unprecedented and unjust. He also showed that if it were passed, Professor Smith would still be at liberty to promulgate his obnoxious views from the pulpit. Mr. Joseph Wood (alder) seconded Dr. Begg's motion. Dr. Beith then rose amid applause to propose the motion which, as it became the finding of the House, may be given in full:—"The General Assembly, considering that the course of the case has confirmed the report of the College Committee, that they had not found any ground sufficient to justify a process for heresy against Professor Robertson Smith, inasmuch as seven of the eight counts in the original libel have been found irrelevant, while, with regard to the remaining count, the explanations offered by Professor Smith at various stages, and in particular his answer to the amended libel, afford satisfactory evidence that in this aspect of the case, also, there is no sufficient ground to support a process for heresy, do resolve to withdraw the libel against him. Further, the Assembly, finding that Professor Smith is blameworthy for the unguarded and incomplete statements of his articles which have occasioned much anxiety in the Church and given offence to many brethren zealous for the honour of the Word of God, instruct the Moderator to admonish Professor Smith with due solemnity as to the past, in the confident expectation that the defects referred to will be guarded against and avoided in time to come. And, finally, the Assembly declares that in declining to decide on these critical views by way of discipline, the Church expresses no opinion in favour of their truth or probability, but leaves the ultimate decision to future inquiry in the spirit of patience, humility, and brotherly charity, admonishing professors to remember that they are not set for the propagating of their own opinions, but for the maintenance of the doctrine and truth committed to the Church."

The following order was passed: That the city council be requested to cause the following inscription to be placed in an appropriate position on the new Latin school building:—

Which in translation reads thus: "These studios nourish youth, delight old age, adorn prosperity, and afford a refuge and a solace in adversity." The Latin is a quotation from "Cicero pro Archia."

After a debate, which lasted eleven hours, the Assembly began to divide at 11.15 p.m., and it was not till an hour and a-half later that the final result was declared. On the first vote Dr. Beith's motion was carried by 287 to 256 over Dr. Begg's. The successful motion was then pitted against Dr. Laidlaw's, when there voted for the latter only 51, against 274. Then came the real tug of war between the motions of Sir Henry Moncrieff and Dr. Beith, and the result was announced as follows:—

For Dr. Beith's motion	...	...	299
For Sir Henry Moncrieff's	...	...	293

Majority for continuing Prof. Smith in the chair	...	...	7
--	-----	-----	---

(On the publication of the division lists it was found that the majority was nine, instead of seven, the numbers being 299 to 290.) On the numbers becoming known the wildest enthusiasm prevailed. Such cheering has rarely been heard within the Free Assembly Hall; while the ladies showed their delight by waving their handkerchiefs even after the applause had begun to subside. When silence was restored, the Moderator admonished Professor Smith in accordance with the terms of the successful motion, and the Professor, in the course of a brief reply, said that while he thanked God for the issue, he had never been more sensible than on that occasion of the blame which rested upon him for statements which had proved to be so incomplete that at the end of three years the opinion of the Assembly was so divided upon them.

Calabr. at Salem
June 1880 - Deantaul
of man

Winthrop, the central figure of this group, was in his early prime, at forty-three. A man of rare grace of person and bearing, he was not more marked by those traits which make men engaging in their intercourse with others, than by those more robust attributes which fit us to determine, to withstand and to prevail. The ladies, at least, will allow me that he was no ordinary person when they know that at the age of seventeen he was a husband, and had embarked upon his third matrimonial venture at the age of thirty. At eighteen he was a justice of the peace, and at twenty-one the father of three sons. He had been educated at Cambridge, the liberal university of England.

Colonel T. W. Higginson was received with loud applause when his name was announced by the president and when he rose to respond. He spoke in his peculiarly interesting conversational manner, delightfully entertaining to the audience. Referring to the unavoidable absence of Governor Long, he said there was a singular appropriateness in the present situation, in that whereas he fancied Endicott in his time thought there was one governor too much, so today, for those who were assembled here, there was one governor too little. Alluding to the hospitality which Salem ever showed its guests, the speaker said that, after all, the thought had come to him that this hospitality was divided, for whereas the Institute was furnishing him with food, he was retrospectively supplying it with a place whereon to feed, for he fancied that the spot on which they were assembled was a part of the old Higginson farm, and therefore his own family property retrospectively. I wish, said he, to be equally hospitable, and therefore I am as happy to see you here as if I owned all these fathers' acres. I do wish that John Higginson had bequeathed me his Neck. [Laughter.] There is an impression that leads us to consider our New England ancestry as plain and prosaic, possessing nothing to compare with the feudalism of classic days. I renounce this idea. There is no ancestry prouder than the ancestry of these men and women who sit around me today. No ancestry can bring up prouder recollections. There is nothing more elegant, more thoughtful, more touching than the early annals of Cambridge, the letters of Winthrop and the journals of Frances Higginson. The surrounding beauty of this spot was never painted in more appropriate colors than as they painted it, and the sweetness of heart and the feeling of tenderness in the letters between husband and wife are nowhere found more finely expressed than in the letters of John Winthrop; although she was his third wife, and much of that peculiar sweetness may have come from long and protracted practice. [Laughter.] In closing he paid tribute to the work of the Essex Institute, and to Salem as the home of Hawthorne. He trusted that the Institute would continue its researches until it had ascertained the origin of the red and yellow flowers which covered the waters of the bay as described by Francis Higginson, and thus vindicate the veracity of his ancestor. [Laughter.]

THE LETTERS.

The following letters were read by the Rev. S. Atwood of the South Church, Salem.

FROM JOHN G. WHITTIER.

DANVERS, 6th Mo., 19th, 1880.

Robert S. Rantoul, Esq.:

My Dear Friend,—I see by the call of the Essex Institute that some probability is suggested that I may furnish a poem for the occasion of the meeting at "The Willows" on the 22d. I would be glad to make the implied probability a fact, but I find it difficult to put my thoughts into metrical form, and there will be little need of it, as I understand a lady of Essex county, who adds to her modern culture and rare poetical gifts the best spirit of her Puritan ancestry, has lent the interest of her verse to the occasion. It was a happy thought of the Institute to select for its first meeting of the season the day and the place of the landing of the great and good governor. And permit me to say, as thy father's old friend, that his choice for orator of the son of him whose genius, statesmanship and eloquence honored the place of his birth, has been equally happy. As I look over the list of the excellent worthies of the first emigration, I find no one who, in all respects, occupies a nobler place in the early colonial history of Massachusetts than John Winthrop. Like Vane and Milton, he was a gentleman as well as a Puritan, a cultured and enlightened statesman: as well as a God-fearing Christian. It was not under his long and wise chief-magistracy that religious bigotry and intolerance bung and tortured their victims and the terrible delusion of witchcraft darkened the sun at noonday over Essex. If he had not quite reached the point where, to use the words of Sir Thomas More, "he could hear heresies talked, and yet let the heretics alone," he was in charity and forbearance far in advance of his generation. I am sorry that I must miss an occasion of so much interest. I hope you will not lack the presence of the distinguished citizen who inherits the best qualities of his honored ancestor, and who as a statesman, scholar and patriot has added no lustre to the name of Winthrop. With sincere regard, thy friend,
JOHN G. WHITTIER.

Nuevos apóstoles. — Nos piden e publicacion de las líneas siguientes:

«Señor cronista del MERCURIO:

Quando en las columnas de su acreditado diario leí, hace tres o cuatro dias a la fecha, un párrafo de crónica referente a la gran falta de policía en el cerro del Baron, se me vino a la mente la idea de hacer llegar a oídos del señor intendente, por conducto de usted, un hecho por demás alarmante y per-turbador del orden público, el cual es el ti-guiente:

En una pieza de la calle del Baron se ha establecido, como quince dias a la fecha, una iglesia de disidentes, llamados cuáqueros, metodistas, o como dicen ellos los únicos após-toles del Cristo encargados de sacar de la ignorancia a las jentes y en especial a los chi-lenos que ni aun principian a abrir los ojos a no ser los pocos que escuchan con docilidad a los cultos europeos. Pues bien: en la capilla citada se suceden desórdenes mayúsculos, consistiendo en pendencias entre los mentores de la verdad, los apóstoles y los incrédulos y fariseos, las jentes del pueblo; multiplicanse los descompasados gritos y soeces insultos, los mojicones y pedradas, a lo que se agrega al drama la petipieza de los que llegan a la ex-chिंगana, hoi templo de las luces, buscando a sus caras amigas para hacer los honores a Baco, quienes no encontrándolas proceden a arrojar tarros y botellas de inmundicias al templo santo, y mas de una vez han untado a los transeuntes con los perfumes mencionados.

Temiendo hacerme cansado, señor cronista, vino otras curiosas revelaciones, suplicán-doles que me preguntar a quien correspondía si los nuevos apóstoles están ejerciendo su culto o propaganda con arreglo a la ley.

Robert Knight Sovereign - in clear Day days

Turning 4th Delays into gloomy days;

How Russell's Plot, the fatal stroke on tyd,

By Hercules Decree, on the Atlantic wide,
The hairy Waters, on the Seas that move,
Which cannot quench the streams of Bondless love
Translated yours into the joys above. —

Transported far beyond all fears & thorns,
Guarded by Angels to their Saviour's Arms
You could not close y<sup>r</sup> perpetuous lady's eye;
You must not see y<sup>r</sup> dearest consort's eye,
Not her expiring, gasping agonies,

For Father & her parents & friends.
Bright Heavenly prayers for you are <sup>your</sup> warmly

Our angels wings, up to the Supt. here, & round
And you are left to mine & day alone.

Once the Gowned Tribe & Family
Of brights descent and Worthy & agree;
Of charming tanglers in our Israel,

On new-born rest and Dads sent to rest;

As Brother, Mistress, Neighbour, Wife, more
Should I exceed, to say beyond compare? <sup>rare.</sup>

Call her the Phoenix, yet you cannot fly,
Whether it be in prose or Poetry.

For Meekness, Pity and Patience;
Rare Modesty, unwearied Diligence;

For Gracious Temper, Prudent Conduct too,
How few of the fair Sex could her undo? ?

Belong to all who love, and understand,

The female who's innocent heart their head.

For precious language bears her company,

Teaching her flight, as to the sky, up sailing.

To dwell and pass with her eternally.

God's will is done, in that to reason

Your will and all unto the world's Friend.

You <sup>gladly</sup> ~~pleased~~! "God, let thy will be done!"
Still do so, now your dearest ones are gone.

If y<sup>r</sup> Great Sovereign takes but his own due,
You are obliged to him, not he to you.

May God Almighty sanctify this <sup>proven</sup>
To the bereaved family and Town;
May the tender brood, under y<sup>r</sup> <sup>wing,</sup> maternal
When clouds are passed over chirp & sing.

May you, sir, free the consecrated place
With purest doctrines and displays of grace
Till you have run and finished yr Race,
That when yr dust shall into dust go down,
You may receive the Bright and Massy Crown
And with your dearest ones unhappy be,
In light above throughout eternity.

B. "for" very pleasant - cordial and mother's acct. Dr. I look best as "she had" expected.

Sat. 3 came and Dr. J. Luman at Cambridge - very cordial.

and then home - delighted at introduction. Saw it in our "Religionists": with Dr.

Leah and G. N. Irish.

Came and Dr. McKim - very civil: say all "How liked him - had heard not quite right - had s<sup>d</sup> "if you don't like"

I leave, just certain in your a told him my impressions are very favorable.

He promised to aid my Cause with Conf. Pub. Soc. on Monday dressed into him & said about Alliance.

Cowan Dr Prady with Leland.

Lord's Day.

Mr. B. had arranged to go with Mr. Brooks - but preferred King Chapel with

Mr. B. Leman on human nature. Dr. Manson - for reward with temptations that was his whole life, in perpetual conversation was "painted" into and the dancer.

at the same time & per. Dr.
B. met - not quite home: it was about 20. days as admitted;
G. many returned. Prayer off in his name: & this is 1st Obed - first & of about. Six years ago Mrs. B. says the Dr.
B. was introduced there.
She & family used to attend

Lunch at Mr Judge Putnam's - Miss Day - find of wife in Hartf.

Newby, 'p' Lang 19. 1881.

Yest. to Union - saw
Dr. Gulliver & Park, G. led me to Wm.
Br. Campbell's room
Stud. law 2 yrs - then ministry -
Lake sup<sup>2</sup> - mines, a year, preach
- then not for last year.

Told him of $20,000 - w<sup>d</sup> like working men. Ask<sup>d</sup> what supervision? G<sup>d</sup> thinks fav. of it, & c<sup>d</sup> unite him thence; then in July.

He mentioned Mr. Huntington, to whom had shown
my letter.

Gulliver & Doak has said he knew a good student at once when he read to give up of last lecture.

Campbell is a W. man
Rev. E. D. Fisk of Long St. took me to B. air for D. Whinn with Wood. & conducted Prayers.

Later 15 min. S. Allen.

Miss Faxon & her son Atk. G. Chalk S. Allen.

They thank me - express interest: wish wife to come,
told them perhaps Friday.

Dr. Cuyler hall M.D. very kind - wish to drive me about in Sleigh; but Came home, as Campbell had to her night visit as in N<sup>o</sup> 1st.

Miss Boston showed me being room - I was of Prof. "Loring's. Made free to ask for a shirt; if none - a gown. She brought one, also a brush; and I "anything" but a toothbrush"! given.

in danger of heart disease.

Stir's impress<sup>n</sup> was good & solemn.
Miss B. that held of it - always found something good in his preaching.

Miss B. wishes me to speak to her young ladies about
S. Ann. I suggest wife: but A.
& J. both say, no.

Lord if I cannot be made a blessing to my flock & people in No. Do not allow me to go there.

O direct my way; & guide the Church there that it may prosper. Warm my heart with a new course of Gospel truth.

Today with these dear Ch<sup>rs</sup> of last time. Lord direct them & direct them. See my way to sustain all in their studies till end of this year.
O God provide. Mrs tells me Mary is getting thinner; yet she looks well; I pray thee of God to guide her & spare for usefulness.
